0

0

0

0

0

0

1

0

0

0

0

0

0

1

0

the morning after like enduring an eight-hour American or Die sta

FOX MAY HAVE moved Glee behind a pay wail on Hulu this fall, but there's one comic gem they won't withhold: Ginger Gonzaga. The sketch comedian hosts the cult Hulu hit The Morning After, a cross between Access Hollywood and SNL's "Weekend Update" that chews up pop culture's current headlines as if they were Chiclets, Gonzaga also pulls pranks,

Idol audition while playing a delusional nerd named Leslie. "I always did weird stunts when I was little." she confesses. "I'd dress up as an old woman and go to strangers' houses. and try to sell them things. I was like, 'Here, buy this Boboliit's an Italian pizza crust!" After college at UC Santa Barbara, Gonzaga trained with the Groundlings and befriended the Funny

Or Die staff. "First I did a hidden camera video, which is such a freshman movel I dressed up like a cow and pretended I was protesting McDonalds. I almost got arrested! I uploaded it to YouTube-but I didn't label it 'comedy.' Half the viewers thought I was hysterical, and the other half thought I was some very sad nut job." And though she now has a steady gig on The Morning After, Gonzaga believes she's still wearing a costume for the role. "The airbrushed makeup that you have to wear to look like a TV anchor? Oh my God." She laughs. "That's a scary mask, too!" orning-after

THANKS TO YOUTUBE and iTunes, Internet TV is giving the networks a serious run for their money. Here, three emerging web-only shows that are much better than anything involving a housewife, desperate or watch what happens

THE BOOTH AT THE END

For fans of Lost, Twin Peaks A series of bite-sized mind games, this show tracks The Man (24's Xander Berkeley) as he solves people's problems by giving them a series of often vicious tasks. As the story unfolds, you realize the problems-and their solutions-are all intertwined, and that The Man is even more dangerous than he seems. hulu.com/the booth-at-the-end

AIM HIGH

For fans of The Secret World of Alex Mack, Chuck As if Jackson Rathbone isn't enough of a draw, this Facebook-only video series blends comedy with nail-biting action sequences as it follows a teenage misfit (Rathbone) on his after-school job...working for the CIA's Counter-Terrorism Bureau. Aimee Teegarden of Friday Night Lights adds some sparkle as the mysterious love interest.

facebook.com/ aimhighseries

PARKER AND MAGGIE

For fans of Friends, It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia What's it like to be young, dumb, and living in an impossibly cool city? Parker and Maggie will soon find out in this comic web series, which focuses on three couples whose lives get turned upside-down by their group therapy ses-sions. With New York City's East Village as their backdrop, they've got a lot more to navigate than their feelings. Bonus: The series is directed by NYLON TV alum Jay Buim! parkerandmag gielle.com

APP OF THE MONTH:

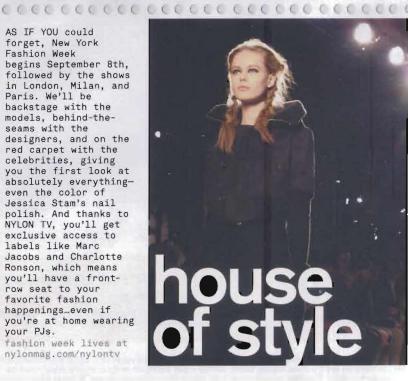

HBO's web TV app, HBO Go, is a brilliant way to make network TV a portable luxury. All you need is an HBO subscription and a good pair of headphones, and you can watch Sookie any time you want (Plus Boardwalk Empire. In Treatment, and older shows like Sex and the City, too). And as the app gains traction, there are rewards for its users: This summer, an episode of True Blood was available a month before it hit television.

hbo go, free if you have hbo on your cable box, hbo.com

AS IF YOU could forget, New York Fashion Week begins September 8th, followed by the shows in London, Milan, and Paris. We'll be backstage with the models, behind-theseams with the designers, and on the red carpet with the celebrities, giving you the first look at absolutely everything-even the color of Jessica Stam's nail polish. And thanks to NYLON TV, you'll get exclusive access to labels like Marc Jacobs and Charlotte Ronson, which means you'll have a frontrow seat to your favorite fashion happenings…even if you're at home wearing your PJs.

fashion week lives at nylonmag.com/nylontv

NYLON Guys is now on Twitter! follow @nylonguysmag